Abstract	The increase of refugee status claiming immigrants in Canada has led to a review of the immigration policy concerning this group. This report looks at the weaknesses of current legislation which is linked to the Geneva Convention and its Protocol, studying Canada's past adherence to the rights afforded under its protection. Also discusses public and government opinion on support for a humanitarian and generous refugee policy and questions of balancing efficiency with procedural fairness to claimants. Gives a chronology of events since 1969.

Résumé	Le processus de reconnaissance du statut de réfugié au sens de la Convention de Genève, tel qu'il est énoncé dans la Loi sur l'immigration, sert à déterminer si les personnes qui revendiquent ce statut y ont effectivement droit et peuvent bénéficier de la protection accordée aux réfugiés au sens de la Convention. Ce processus s'est avéré inadéquat, tant au point de vue juridique que pratique. INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fiched product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

Institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in Microlog. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprint may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (●) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications provinciales: Des ententes de dépôt ont été conclues avec plusieurs bibliothèques provinciales pour que les abonnés de Microlog reçoivent toutes les publications de ces provinces. Lorsqu'aucune entente n'existe, les listes de publications émises par les provinces sont examinées afin d'acquiescer les documents.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.
2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.
3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.
4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.
5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

"How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?"

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

"Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?"

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back. Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

1990 survey of sport fishing in Saskatchewan

by A.R. Murray, K.W. Brickley and R. Joerissen. Regina : Saskatchewan Environment and Resource Management, Fisheries Branch, 1993. xi, 122 p. : maps. (Fisheries technical report ; 93-4)
MICROLOG 94-01677 2 fiche

The recreational fishery in Saskatchewan was evaluated by means of questionnaires sent to a sample of licensed anglers who had fished there in 1990. This study was conducted to provide information on the numbers, origins, and destinations of anglers, their expenditures and investments in activities and equipment used for angling, as well as the numbers, weight, species harvested, and the amount of fishing effort expended. Appendices contain the questionnaires used in 1990 and information on angler harvest, expenditures, and investments.

27 août 1991, Maskinongé, tornade

Dans la journée du 27 août 1991 plusieurs événements violents se sont produits un peu partout au Québec. La nature s'est particulièrement déchaînée près du lac Saint-Pierre, plus précisément sur la région de Maskinongé et de Notre-Dame-De-Pierreville, où une tornade s'est produite. Dans ce rapport préliminaire, nous allons examiner l'environnement dans lequel la tornade s'est produite, de même que les éléments dynamiques et thermodynamiques qui ont permis son développement. Nous allons également démontrer que le temps violent qui s'est produit sur cette région avait une relation directe avec celui qui s'était abattu sur la région de l'Abitibi dans la nuit du 26 au 27 août. Nous allons déterminer la trajectoire du complexe orageux responsable du temps violent sur une grande partie du Québec et plus particulièrement de l'orage supercellulaire qui a généré la tornade. De plus, grâce au radar de Ste-Anne-De-Bellevue, qui offre la possibilité de visualiser des coupes verticales, nous étudierons la morphologie de cet orage.

The purpose of this project is to study the validity of the premise: quality education in Brooks is preceived to be the result of the 'right' blend of attention to academic success and attention to the development of 'character' within the framework of a firm, but supportive set of behavioural expectations and policies; and as an outcome of addressing the premise it is expected to define a valid set of quality indicators. This report presents a literature review, the Brooks project, findings and a summary and discussion. In addition, district perceptions, student preceptions, behaviour and achievement are analyzed, as well as the community's perceptions.

A l'automne 1987, Thompson Lightstone a mené un sondage de l'attitude du public à l'égard du multiculturalisme. Dans ce bref rapport qui suit, les conseillers Optima résument les principales constatations de cette enquête qui fut menée en novembre 1987 et rapproche ces conclusions de celles d'autres études sur l'attitude du public à l'égard du multiculturalisme.

L'analyse de ces informations permet de tracer un portrait de l'activité sur les chantiers et de la population qui y oeuvre. Ainsi, les données contenues dans ce document posent un diagnostic sur l'état général de l'industrie de la construction, dans l'ensemble du Québec et chacune des régions. Il présente d'abord les principaux indicateurs économiques de l'industrie ainsi que les faits saillants survenus au cours de l'année en matière de relations du travail; il étudie les principales caractéristiques des employeurs; et, se penche sur la question des salariés assujettis au Décret de la construction. Finalement, les quatre annexes qui complètent ce document fournissent, non seulement certaines définitions nécessaires à son interprétation, mais aussi près de 40 tableaux statistiques complémentaires à ceux inclus dans le texte.

L'aménagement rationnel de la forêt pour produire la matière ligneuse en quantité et en qualité exige des connaissances détaillées sur la capacité des arbres et des peuplements à produire du bois. Ce rapport analyse les différentes grandeurs dendrométriques, ainsi que leurs interrelations, pour établir les critères quantitatifs propres au classement des stations d'étude et donner ainsi à l'utilisateur (responsables de l'UG-Chic-Chocs) une première évaluation du rendement.

Analytic approximation to randomly oriented spheroid extinction

The immediate objective of this work is to significantly reduce the computational burden in calculating the extinction from non-spherical particles. This allows for the exploration of the effects of non-spherical particles on the performance of obscurants and electro-optical systems. The longer term goal of this work is to alleviate the remaining constraints in the theoretical consideration of non-spherical aerosols and obscurants of either natural or artificial origin. This will aid not only in finding better obscurants but also in the possible identification and remote classification of such aerosols.

This report is concerned about the gap between the promise and the results of shallow seismic reflection (SSR) surveys in areas like Waterloo Region. Its hypothesis is that if the various components of SSR acquisition and processing can be isolated, examined, and optimized, then the potential for this technique can be improved as well. The report examines shot depths, shot designs, gun designs, recording techniques and equipment, and data processing. The improvement achieved is assessed by comparing field sections recorded with and without the results of experimentation with the factors listed. The history of SSR is described and two section comparisons are given to assess the advantages of different data collection and processing techniques.

Ce rapport a trait à une étude entreprise en collaboration avec le Service d'Environnement Atmosphérique d'Environnement Canada et le Centre St-Laurent dans le but d'évaluer la contribution de la composante atmosphérique dans la composition chimique du fleuve St-Laurent et quelques uns de ses tributaires. Du fait que très peu d'information existe sur ce sujet qui peut revêtir un caractère important dans le cadre du mandat du Centre St-Laurent, nous avons dans un premier temps effectué une recherche bibliographique dans le but de faire le point sur la situation. Ce rapport résume sommairement les différents éléments sur lesquels nous nous sommes penchés et a pour but de suggérer une stratégie expérimentale qui permette d'entreprendre à court et moyen termes une étude systématique visant à quantifier la part de cette composante atmosphérique à la contamination du fleuve par certaines toxines organiques.

L'étude a été entreprise en se basant sur toutes les données disponibles concernant la nature et la quantité des espèces chimiques, à caractère inorganique, mesurées dans les dépôts secs et dans les dépôts humides, en Amérique du Nord et sur d'autres continents. L'analyse de la situation dans le bassin hydrographique du fleuve Saint-Laurent a été faite en considérant les apports prévisibles au Québec, les caractéristiques de 25 espèces chimiques inorganiques, les propriétés de 7 techniques de dosage, les particularités de 3 méthodes d'échantillonnage, les sites potentiels d'échantillonnage représentatif.

Beyond comprehension : why 'hard reading' is too easy

by D. Bogdan and J. Cunningham. Toronto : Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, 1992. 7 p. ONTERIS: ON06564
MICROLOG 94-01558 1 fiche

This paper is a response to the Keith Raitz theory on the reading act which considered the concept of 'easy reading' as a misleading conduit theory of communication and proposed as an alternative the concept of 'hard reading'. Also included are some implications of a literary model of reading as paradigmatic of all reading afforded by a constructionist or actualization model of reading.

MICROLOG 94-02145 1 fiche

The scripts of our lives as we age are changing dramatically, and not only as a function of well-publicized demographic changes, but also as a result of thorough-going changes in work and the economy, and family. Yet, social policy for an aging Canada is often being built, changed or dismantled as if tomorrow will be not only like today, but like yesterday. In exploring some of these changes and their implications, the research frontiers of families, women and work are probed to find out how what we know now might be bridged with what we still need to know. The hope is that our growing knowledge about aging in social context can be bridged with knowledge about economic and social changes to the benefit of social policy and us all as we age.

British Columbia community economic dependencies by G. Horne and L. Robson. Victoria : British Columbia Round Table on the Environment and the Economy, 1993. 32 p. Bibliogr. MICROLOG 94-02053 1 fiche

This background report uses an economic base approach to describe the local economies of 55 small areas of the province of British Columbia for the year 1990. A number of data sources were used to estimate basic and nonbasic employment and income for each local area and for the particular industries of forestry, mining, fishing and trapping, agriculture and tourism within the basic sector. Community dependence on non-employment from such sources as unemployment insurance, pension, investments, transfer payments and social assistance is also estimated. The report also presents some preliminary work on the application of the local area database to the issue of estimating local economic impacts. Two sets of ratios of total income to basic income for each local area are presented and the use of these ratios for estimating impacts is discussed. The stability of these ratios under changing circumstances and the resulting implications for estimating impacts is also discussed. BC CO MU PR

Dans le cadre d'un programme national d'études des caries des principales essences forestières canadiennes, de nombreuses dissections d'arbres furent réalisées au Québec entre 1939 et 1957. L'identité et l'importance des champignons responsables des caries étaient alors déterminées. Par la même occasion, on cherchait à établir des facteurs de pertes attribuables à ces caries lors du mesurage des bois. Ce document présente un rapport d'information sur les caries de l'épinette noire dans la forêt boréale au Québec. Il examine précisément les travaux sur le terrain, l'analyse des données, les champignons responsables des caries, et les données volumétriques.

This report is the summary of the work performed to date in the second phase of the gravity assisted immiscible gas injection (GAIGI) project to determine the recovery efficiency of GAIGI in sandpicks and in Rainbow Keg River F pool cores. The study performed a series of corefloods at reservoir conditions using full diameter reservoir core to assess further the applicability of GAIGI for the candidate reservoir; used computer assisted tomography (CAT) for the in-situ measurement of fluid saturations during GAIGI; modelled new and existing experimental results; measured the rock properties of a heterogeneous carbonate reservoir, including primary and secondary porosity and the corresponding permeability, measured fluid/rock properties of a heterogeneous carbonate reservoir such as the three phase apillary pressures and relative permeabilities, and discriminated between primary and secondary contributions in each curve; and generated the vug size distribution and the fracture distribution of the reservoir using thin section imaging, CAT, and formation microscanner data.

Charting developmental paths of giftedness : early adolescence, girls and the social domain

by D. Matthews. Toronto : Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, 1992. 9 p. : ill. Bibliogr. Presented at the OERC Conference. ONTERIS: ON06062

MICROLOG 94-01561 1 fiche

Early adolescence can be problematic for highly able girls, in their experience of a conflict between their developing gender identity, and their established identity as high academic achievers. This paper promotes a reconceptualization of giftedness as domain-specific developmental advancement. Sex differences reflecting gender stereotypes are discussed, particularly as these illustrate the higher salience for girls of the social domain at this developmental stage. Discussion focuses on the implications of the findings for the provision of gifted education in early adolescence, with a view to encouraging academically able girls to maintain self-esteem and to consider and retain appropriate career ambitions.

In Quebec Lophophacidium hyperboreum is the causal organism of snow-blight of eastern white pine and several species of spruce. The fungus can be controlled with a single application of 75% solution of lime sulfur in October. The extremely high effective concentration of lime sulfur, however, renders the treatment unattractive on economic and environmental grounds. To find a more efficient chemical for the control of L. hyperboreum, a number of pesticides were assayed in the field at Valcartier, Quebec County, from 1974 to 1977.

The question of who governs in a democratic society has engaged the attention of philosophers, social scientists, and ordinary citizens for a long time, and even when answers, if any, are found to the question, should the social structure change, for whatever reason, the question has to be faced anew and new, indeed fresh, answers sought. This report deals with the civic participation of visible or racial minorities in the Canadian society. The study attempts : to examine and critically analyze the available literature; to determine the salient issues; to determine issues and areas for further study; to tease out socio-economic indicators, the relevancy and significance of which may be tested in an empirical study; and to make recommendations where possible.

The numerous reasons for teaching thinking have been tied to the perceived needs of the present and future technological society. Expectations are placed on individuals to be self-sufficient, responsible citizens, and part of an efficient work force, oriented toward an information age. The purpose of this project was to undertake a three-year longitudinal evaluation of the two cognitive education programs, Instrumental Enrichment (I.E.) and Strategies Program for Effective Learning/Thinking (S.P.E.L.T.). I.E. was taught out of curricular content, while S.P.E.L.T. was taught directly within curricular content. Specifically, the effectiveness of I.E. and S.P.E.L.T. cognitive education programs was compared with traditional instruction at two initial grade levels, 4 and 7, for three diagnostic groups, gifted, learning disabled and normal achievers. In February 1993 the B.C. Ministry of Health announced New Directions for a Healthy British Columbia. The 38 initiatives it contains reflect the four essential elements of New Directions: equal access, effective management and planning, efficient use of limited resources, and increased accountability both for individuals and for the government. This publication provides a snapshot of what is happening right now in British Columbia from the perspective of some of the people involved. It is a collection of stories from people working in their own communities to bring better health services closer to home.

The estuary of the Fraser River has been under pressure from industrial development along its shoreline and the increasing population in the region. Studies conducted in the late 1970's showed extensive use of both the sedge marshes and mudflat areas as rearing sites by juvenile salmonids and other fish species. In 1980, 3 sites were chosen on Sturgeon and Roberts banks for further study of the food available to the fish populations. These sites were representative of the different habitats available and varied in sediment type, exposure, vegetative cover, salinity and temperature. Over a period of 15 months, 2 sampling methods were used to sample the meiofauna in the sediment and the epifauna above the bottom. This report discusses materials and methods, core and sled samples, statistical analysis and compares these habitats with other estuaries.

The Secretariat of the Ontario Premier's Council on Economic renewal initiated the Comparative Indicators Project to identify and analyze economic and social indicators which would be helpful in positioning Ontario's performance within North America. The objective of this study is to provide an industry-specific comparison of the skill level of the Ontario work force with those of other jurisdictions. The focus is on comparisons of the educational attainment and occupational mix--proxies of skill levels--of the Ontario work force by industry with other jurisdictions in Canada and the United States.

L'enquête de 1989 sur les comportements des Québécois en matière d'activités culturelles de loisir permet une mise à jour des données révélées par les deux enquêtes antérieures sur le même sujet, celles de 1979 et de 1983. L'objectif premier de ce document est de présenter les grandes lignes qui ressortent du sondage de 1989, et de procéder à des comparaisons avec l'enquête de 1983. Il s'agit surtout de faire état des principales données descriptives que l'on peut tirer de l'enquête, de donner un aperçu des grandes tendances qui en ressortent, afin de permettre ultérieurement une exploitation plus poussée des résultats, sur des aspects particuliers.

Le Lophophacium hyperboreum est un champignon responsable des brûlures printanières qui affectent le pin blanc et diverses espèces d'épinettes au Québec. Le champignon peut être détruit au moyen d'une seule application, en octobre, d'une solution à 75 % d'une bouillie soufrée. La bouillie soufrée est efficace à des concentrations très élevées ce qui la rend peu pratique pour des raisons économiques et environnementales. Dans le but de découvrir un produit chimique efficacement pour combattre le L. hyperboreum, on a évalué un certain nombre de pesticides sur le terrain à Valcartier, comté de Québec, entre 1974 et 1977.

A coupling mechanism for the interactions between boundary layer and sea surface layer is proposed and various characteristics of this mechanism are discussed. The coupled wind-sea model is used to estimate, study, and discuss the fluxes of momentum, sensible heat, and latent heat. A new mechanism for calculating these fluxes is proposed, after considering the impacts of the sea state on calculated fluxes.

The purpose of this project was to apply the ASHRAE 90.1 standard to a multi-unit residential building and examine what additional technical criteria could be incorporated into the C-2000 Program. In addition, the project determined how a building developer and design team respond to the preliminary technical criteria for C-2000 buildings. Based on these responses, recommendations have been made to improve the development of the technical criteria. The results of this study will provide a basis for the next step in the C-2000 Program which is the development of technical criteria such as performance targets, prescriptive requirements and verification.

Dans la première partie de ce document, on retrouve un tableau d'ensemble, succinct mais le plus à jour possible, de la situation démographique du Québec. Les questions abordées sont la fécondité, l'immigration, les échanges migratoires et le vieillissement. On y compare les situations du Québec, de l'Ontario et de l'ensemble du Canada. Dans la deuxième partie, l'examen de la situation des municipalités, des villes et même des quartiers d'une même ville fait ressortir l'ampleur des disparités démographiques, sociales et économiques qui les distinguent. Cette sorte de vue d'en bas contraste avec la vue panoramique des sommets. Dans la troisième partie de cet ouvrage, on présente une analyse des entraves les plus inquiétantes de l'évolution actuelle du Québec. En conclusion, le Conseil propose trois voies de développement qu'il considère comme autant de conditions au nécessaire redressement. PR QU SA

The objective of the project was to design, construct and monitor an artificial sill pillar in the West Zone of Lupin Mine. Practical and economic assessments would then be made to determine if artificial sill pillars in the West

Zone should become part of the mine planning and design process. The project was broken down into 4 milestones: rock mechanics assessment and instrumentation of ore and wall rocks, design of the artificial sill pillar; construction of the artificial sill pillar; and mine out the stope below the artificial sill pillar, evaluate the effectiveness of the pillar, and report the results of the project. These milestones are each reported in this document. CA CM NR PS SC prepared by D. Peter McLeod ; revised by Peter Taaffe. Ottawa : Multiculturalism, Policy, Analysis and Research, 1988. 219 p. Bibliogr. MICROLOG 94-01937 3 fiche

This directory is a sample of some of the Canadians or persons connected with Canada from ethnocultural backgrounds other than British or French who have achieved national or international recognition in their respective fields. This directory only lists persons who clearly belong to an ethnocultural group other than British or French. While each individual is identified as coming from a specific ethnocultural background, there are many who had a multiple/diverse heritage, and many who, while proud of their heritage, nevertheless consider themselves to be wholly Canadian. Moreover, women are unfortunately underrepresented, partly since throughout most of Canadian history they have been denied many of the opportunities open to men, and also women who married men of British or French descent and took their husband's name after marriage, are sometimes difficult to identify as coming from ethnocultural backgrounds other than British or French. As well as providing the name, ethnocultural background, field of expertise, and date of birth/death, it also provides a short description of the person, and includes a citation on where the information was found.

The major purpose of this study was to determine the employment status of the 1989-90 cohort of graduates from the Faculties of Education of the Province of Alberta. The study investigated the proportion of graduates who enter teaching in Alberta to determine factors influencing a graduate's decision to enter teaching, and to determine if policy planners can count on a provincial talent pool of trained teachers who are not currently teaching but who might teach in the future if positions became available. To gather information, a survey was done followed by a follow-up interview, as well as a record check, from Alberta Education, of persons who applied for a teaching certificate.

Dynamic network equilibrium problem formulated as an infinite dimensional variational inequality problem by J.H. Wu. Montreal : Université de Montréal, Centre de recherche sur les transports, 1993. 19 p. Bibliogr. (Publication ; no. 952) MICROLOG 94-01542 1 fiche

The dynamic network equilibrium problem is to find time-varying network flows given an origin-destination demand departure rate for a time period in a congested network. This paper formulates the problem mathematically as an infinite dimensional variational inequality problem that is then converted into a finite dimensional variational inequality problem through a discretization. A standard simplicial projection method is adapted so that the solution method is highly decomposable by each origin-destination and time period.

Education-job mismatch among Canadian university graduates : implications for employers and educators

This paper presents some of the key findings from a recent study of education-job mismatch among university graduates. It argues that research on this form of underemployment can greatly enhance our knowledge of the changing structure of labour market opportunities and the relationship between education credentials and job skill requirements. In the wake of recent concerns about skill shortages the education system has borne the brunt of criticism for failing to adequately prepare young people for labour market entry. However, what is perceived as a problem of skills shortages may be more of a problem of inadequate skills utilization, in which case policy responses placing greater onus on employers are warranted.

Container stock to be overwintered is often examined during hardening to monitor bud development and frost hardness. Shoot tips are collected for dissection to determine the proportion of seedlings that have initiated or set terminal buds, and subsequently to determine the degree to which bud development has occurred, assessed by the number of needle primordia present. Buds are often stored before dissection but no guidelines exist for the storage of shoot tips after collection. This paper describes the effects of storage of live samples, with and without refrigeration, on the estimation of bud initiation and needle primordia in black spruce container seedling terminal buds.

Over the past 10 years tremendous technological advances have been made in the production of small and medium-sized clean-burning wood stoves, but there has been no development of low cost, clean-burning appliances large enough to heat a typical rural home, either large stove or central wood-fired systems. A high percentage of such homes are occupied by low income families. by H.C. Jain. Ottawa : Secretary of State, Multiculturalism, 1988. 52 p. Bibliogr. MICROLOG 94-01902 1 fiche

This document examines the three theories or approaches of employment discrimination; evidence of discrimination; and participation or lack thereof of visible minority groups in a variety of Canadian institutions. It describes and analyzes the federal affirmative action or employment equity policies in Canada and the United States, the impact of affirmative action legislation in the United States on the employment and earnings of blacks and other minorities, and lessons of the United States experience for Canada. Finally, it provides a summary along with policy implications and recommendations.

The purpose of this report is to present highlights about employment of ethnic groups in the clothing, textile, knitting mill, and leather industries. All the data used are from the 1981 Census of Canada. It provides highlights about Canadian labour force activity by ethnic origin, sex, and industry (clothing, textile, knitting mill, and leather). It includes illustrative graphs to emphasize important findings. Appendices present specific notes about the data, the ethnic groups included in the study, limitations on interpretation of results, and particular 1981 Census questions used in tabulating the data. Another appendix provides detailed tables with additional results for the interested reader.

Violence or fear of violence is part of the daily reality of every Canadian girl. The violence may come in the form of sexism, racism, intimidation, threats, physical abuse, sexual assault and verbal, emotional or psychological abuse. The purpose of this discussion paper is to explore the various forms of violence that threaten the lives of adolescent girls. The scope of this violence and its impact is discussed in the light of current research. The second half of the paper will address strategies to end the violence, with schools playing a leadership role in creating a collaborative community response.

Enhanced oil recovery by a miscibility enhancing process, part II : optimization studies : final report

Seventeen demonstration experiments were conducted in core from Rainbow Keg River B pool to determine if cyclic pressure pulsing under restricted flow could provide increased mass transfer between solvent and oil and also allow for the solvent to access previously inaccessible oil through lateral spread. Methane was used as the solvent and n-pentane as the oil. The choice of materials was made to match density and viscosity ratios of the reservoir fluids while maintaining a simple composition of each phase, so that effluent analysis could be simplified. The core was always mounted in the vertical position and saturated with n-pentane, methane was injected at various rates, and different pressure pulsing scenarios were applied. Repeated calibration experiments were performed on the gas chromatograph to help with the analysis of the results.

The Rainbow Keg River formation has been exploited by Husky Oil in a number of pools, many of which are undergoing a secondary or tertiary miscible vertical flood with a slug of solvent pushed downwards by a chase gas. Husky owns a patent for the enhancement of vertical miscible floods in which shut-in is one of the technological concepts outlined. This report assesses the potential of pressure pulsing and shut in for the improvement of the miscible floods of the Rainbow Lake area. Experimental work consisted of miscible displacement tests of methane displacing pentane for shut-in tests and different pressure pulsing cycles. Computer assisted tomography (CAT) was used for the characterization of core material from one well in the north lobe of the Rainbow Keg River B Pool. The CAT scans were used for the preparation of a detail porosity map to study the porosity distribution inside the core. The core was used for the miscible displacement tests. The theoretical work developed a computer simulation model that incorporates mass transfer between heterogeneous grids under stable or unstable conditions without discrimination, following the fractional flow approach.

This study measured the water solubility, octanol-water partition coefficients, Henry's constant, hydrolysis, photolysis, sediment-water partitioning of TCMTB, benzothiazole (BT), 2-mercaptobenzothiazole (MBT), 2-(methylthio)-benzothiazole (MTBT), and 2-methylbenzothiazole (MeBT). prepared for Greater Vancouver Regional District ; by Norecol, Dames and Moore Inc. Richmond, B.C. : The Corporation, 1993. xvii, 47 p.

In early 1985, the Greater Vancouver Regional District began studying drinking water quality in the metropolitan area. The study ended in the development of a multi-phased drinking water quality improvement plan that proposed a number of measures, including introduction of secondary disinfection to address bacterial regrowth in the distribution system. Chloramination and rechlorination processes were chosen for the secondary disinfection and testing was begun. During chloramination testing, there were two fish kills in the City of Surrey, raising concerns about its use. An environmental impact assessment was undertaken of the two processes. This report provides a summary of the public information stage and the comparative assessment of the impacts of the two alternatives on the environment, health, water users, mitigation strategies, liabilities, and costs.

The solar heat gain characteristics of fenestration systems impact daytime building energy performance, occupant comfort, and utility load demands. A measure of the fraction of available solar energy entering a building interior per unit window area is defined as the solar heat gain coefficient (SHGC). Together with a window's thermal transmittance, the SHGC is used in the ranking of comparative fenestration products and allows for the calculation of Energy Rating numbers and annual energy performance. This project was commissioned by CANMET to support the development of testing capabilities for the national window rating and labelling program. The report describes activities performed by the Solar Calorimetry Laboratory toward the development of a SHGC test method using simulated solar irradiance.

Gremmeniella abietina (Lgbg.) Morelet, a pathogenic Discomycete, is the cause of mortality of young pines and spruces in Quebec. To develop chemical control methods effective for Quebec, a number of fungicides were assayed in the laboratory from 1972-74 and in the field from 1973-74. Two strains of
G. abietina, one occurring on jack pine near Cap-de-la-Madeleine and the other on black spruce at Lac Jacques Cartier in Laurentide Park, were investigated.

applications of 1,3 % Daconil 2787 wettable

assays were continued in the field at Valcartier,

In 1992, the School Food Nutrition Program provided subsidized meals and nutrition education for children in 15 Toronto Board schools. An evaluation of the program was undertaken during its first year of operation. This study analyzes findings from the following sources: questionnaire given to 3000 students, analysis of school attendance and lateness records, focus groups, and questionnaires given to teachers and parents.

by Kyra Woudstra ; edited by Carolyn Whitzman ; for the Safe City Committee, Planning and Development Dept., City of Toronto. Toronto : The Committee, 1993. 16 p. Bibliogr. MICROLOG 94-02068 1 fiche

There is increasing concern about the violence in our neighbourhoods. Merchants are concerned about being victimized and about the impact crime and violence have on their livelihood. In response to these concerns, the City of Toronto Safe City Committee organized a forum. This report outlines the presentations, along with the question and answer period which followed. Participants represented business improvement areas within the Greater Toronto Area as well as business people from Kitchener-Waterloo. The purpose of this Forum was to move from concern into action.

The objective of this paper is to trace the evolution of northern housing policy. It begins by providing a definition of the geographic area considered to be "The North." Discussion then focuses on a number of reasons that may have contributed to the lack of precision in developing a distinctly Northern policy. It then proceeds period by period to document policy evolution from 1930 to the 1990s. Finally, it highlights the main themes of evolution and briefly discusses a number of lessons learned during the past fifty to sixty years of policy development.

Experimental evaluation of the effect of distortion in thermal plume models

by B.G. Krishnappan and C.K. Jonys. Burlington, Ont. : Canada Centre for Inland Waters, National Water Research Institute, 1990. 6 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (NWRI contribution ; 90-86) MICROLOG 94-01955 1 fiche

To assess the impact of thermal discharges from power plants into large bodies of water such as a lake, it is necessary to know mixing characteristics and temperature distributions. Such information is often obtained by simulating the phenomenon in a small scale model in the laboratory (physical model). Invariably, the physical models are distorted because of the use of different geometric scales for the horizontal and vertical directions. This study evaluated the effect of geometric distortion by studying thermal discharge processes in a model with and without distortion.

The EXPRES expert system is being developed to aid regulatory personnel in their assessment of the potential for pesticides to contaminate the soil and shallow groundwater environment. The expert system, known as EXPRES (EXpert system for Pesticide Regulatory Evaluation Simulation), consists of two existing numerical models that are used to simulate the fate of pesticides in the unsaturated zone, coupled with a knowledge-based system that guides the user through the choice of all the necessary information for characterizing the physical, climatic, hydrogeological, pedological, and agricultural setting of typical agricultural regions across Canada. This report outlines the design, development, and operation of the expert system, and also provides a brief overview of EXPRES.

Some CANDU nuclear generating stations have considerable amounts of hard sludge deposits in the steam generators which are beginning to affect their performance both directly through interfering with the steam/water flow and with heat transfer, and indirectly by providing sites for cracking, intergranular attack, crevice corrosion, and/or pitting of tube and support structures under the adherent deposits. This report presents results of a study on the effect of chemical reactions between sludge components on the consolidation of sludge.

La première partie de ce document traite de la fécondité scandinave depuis 1960. Les caractéristiques démographiques de cette évolution y sont décrites et quelques hypothèses de l'effet des politiques familiales sur l'évolution de la fécondité sont mentionnées. Les données ayant permis la description de l'évolution de la fécondité en Scandinavie figurent en annexe. La deuxième partie présente les politiques familiales scandinaves. Les mesures relatives aux congés parentaux, aux services de garde d'enfants et au soutien financier aux familles constituent l'essentiel de la présentation. Alors que la politique suédoise fait l'objet d'une description détaillée, les politiques danoise et norvégienne sont présentées sous forme de tableaux. Finalement, une troisième partie discute l'effet à court terme (indice synthétique) et à long terme (descendance finale) de ces politiques sur l'évolution de la fécondité. Quelques réflexions sur l'intérêt des politiques scandinaves pour le Québec concluent le rapport.

The 1988-89 Northeast Cooperative Woodstove Study (NCWS) evaluated the in-home performance of 25 woodstoves representing five models in Glens Falls, New York. Two of the stove models were non-catalytic and the remaining three were catalytic. The study emphasized the measurement of particulate emissions during five week-long samplings in each home and the durability of the stove during the three-month sampling period. As the Country Flame BBF-6 showed lower emission rates, it was decided to monitor the stove at the end of the second year of use (March 1990) to evaluate its long term durability. A Blaze King stove was also monitored. The catalysts of any failing stoves were monitored in the laboratory to isolate the causes of field performance deterioration, and lab tests of the catalysts were used as an opportunity to develop a lab emissions test procedure that effectively simulated the real world. The evaluation used the same AWES monitoring system as was used in 1988-89.

The Snare River provides the Yellowknife region with hydroelectric power at three dams currently on line. In 1975, further development upstream from the three dams was proposed, one scenario of which required the construction of a new dam and generating station at the outflow of Indin Lake. In response to this proposal, a survey of the fish resources of Indin Lake was begun from May to September 1976 to collect data for impact assessment. A three-day survey had been conducted in July 1972 to collect biological-limnological data for assessing the lake's sport and commercial fishery potential. The proposed development did not progress beyond the feasibility stage and no additional field program was scheduled. This reports presents the data collected in the 1976 fish sampling program, including biological data on length, weight, age, sex, maturity, and stomach contents of lake trout, lake whitefish, Arctic grayling, lake cisco, round whitefish, northern pike, and longnose sucker. Summaries of catch per mesh size, angling data, and the season's catch of juveniles and small fish in eight inlet streams are also included. Maps showing lake bathymetry data from echo sounding transects are included.

Data gathered since 1984 from a commercial sampling program of capelin catches and shrimp-groundfish survey catches between 1990 and 1992 are analyzed to update our knowledge of the fishery and biological characteristics of the species. Distribution patterns for Gulf of St. Lawrence capelin are relatively constant from year to year. The main length classes change from year to year but three year old fish are always predominant. Males are generally longer and heavier than females of the same age. For a given length, capelin from Division 4R weigh more than those from 4S and 4T Divisions. The fishery is based on the presence of only two age classes and ripe females are the main target. Landings may therefore fluctuate with variations in recruitment. Results presented here may help those involved in this fishery when considering new market possibilities.

Flocculation of fine-grained sediment in the freshwater fluvial environment : a method of analysis

by I.G. Droppo and E.D. Ongley. Burlington,

Ont. : Canada Centre for Inland Waters, National Water Research Institute, 1990. 32 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (NWRI contribution ; 90-89)
MICROLOG 94-01956 1 fiche

To improve the understanding of the significance of flocculation in the fluvial environment, suspended particle characteristics of Oakville Sixteen-Mile Creek were studied to develop a non-destructive, direct observation method for determining floc characteristics such as equivalent spherical diameter, surface area, perimeter, and circularity; to determine the extent to which flocculation is present in the freshwater fluvial system; to determine the stability of flocs; and to establish the advantages and disadvantages of the sampling and analytical method. The method used involved collecting a water sample into a settling chamber where the suspended solids settle under gravity onto an inverted microscope slide. The slide is then placed on an inverted microscope and photographs of the flocs are taken through the microscope. The transparencies are rear-projected onto a translucent digitizer to obtain digital output.

Flocculation of suspended fine-grained sediment in rivers

by I.G. Droppo and E.D. Ongley. Burlington, Ont. : Canada Centre for Inland Waters, National Water Research Institute, 1990. 17 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (NWRI contribution ; 90-78)
MICROLOG 94-01961 1 fiche

Fine-grained sediment flocculation is a phenomenon which is not fully understood in the freshwater fluvial environment. This study examined the suspended sediment characteristics of a southern Ontario river in order to determine the nature of flocculated suspended sediment and the factors which may influence it. It is the first research to quantify flocculation as the primary mode of transport for fine-grained mineral sediment in a river. As flocculation is known to alter the settling characteristics of particles, and potentially their ability to transport contaminants, there are important practical environmental consequences for flocculation in rivers.

Forest biomass harvesting in private forests is usually carried out in dense, young stands comprising stems whose diameter at breast height varies from 2-12 cm. Because of lack of knowledge in the harvesting of these stands, a simulation model was designed and constructed to identify and develop efficient harvesting systems. This report describes the simulation model developed, including its use, the required data to carry out a simulation, and the results obtained. Different situations are presented where simulation may be used to forecast and improve harvesting productivity and costs. An example of a chip harvesting simulation for biomass is presented, along with a discussion of results.

It is intended to assess, at a preliminary level, whether it would be feasible, and desirable for CMHC to undertake the development of an 'international housing industry marketplace', a 'World house', a 'Canadian/export house' and a 'Show court' demonstration program. The study involved a review of the pertinent documentation and 15 interviews with 23 participants. Interviews were conducted both face-to-face and by phone. All interviewees were contacted in advance, were informed of the objectives and methodology of the study, and of the fact that this study was being conducted on behalf of the CMHC. This paper reports on a teacher induction initiative undertaken in one school board in Ontario. The main feature of this board's approach to new teacher support was the school-based focus as a complement to the kind of program usually developed throughout the province. The paper presents an overview of 4 methods of school-based support developed in 4 different schools and pays attention to the process of program development, the participatory approach taken, and the emphasis placed on individual school contexts. It highlights issues to be considered in the development of school-based induction support programs. Finally, the report considers some implications of this work for school boards and faculties of education involved in teacher education reform initiatives.

Suspended sediment particles and bacteria, because of their surface area and charge, may play a role in the binding of aquatic contaminants. Little is known as to what degree each of these factors play in the formation of suspended aggregates. Flocculation of particles can alter their hydrodynamic properties in aquatic environments and therefore may have significant implications for contaminant transport. In this study, the role dissolved organic carbon plays in the production of bacterial aggregates is examined as a step to gaining a better understanding of bacterial-particle interaction and suspended particulate formation.

For this vehicle routing application, a specialized methodology is devised for merging two vehicle routing solutions into a single solution that is likely to be feasible with respect to the time window constraints. Computational results on a standard set of test problems are reported, and comparisons are provided with other problem-solving heuristics.

The Golf industry in British Columbia : financial results and economic impacts, 1987-90

The golf industry is expanding at a rapid pace in popularity to the leisure economy. This study's objectives are threefold: to prepare a detailed database of financial and economic data pertaining to the golf industry in B.C.; to assess the total economic impacts of the industry at both the provincial and the regional levels; and to evaluate the general demand conditions for golf in B.C., with the aim of identifying the overall contribution of golf tourism. The goal of the study would not be to develop, nor even to make recommendations on, a marketing strategy. It is, however, setting out a framework for what the golf industry is worth to our economy, and how and where it has been expanding, with an emphasis on establishing credible and definitive results for use by all interested parties.

The purpose of this report is to provide a "Discussion Paper" which addresses the opportunities for a planned tourism golf industry in British Columbia. It is intended to reference and consolidate previous studies into the golf industry in an attempt to outline the key problems, opportunities and possible directions that the golf industry could consider. It addresses both the market demand and the product supply for B.C. resident travelling golfers, for upscale tourist resort development opportunities, as well as the requirement for more affordable, pay-for-play golf facilities.

Stock assessments and yield options are developed for the Pacific coast of Canada for lingcod, Pacific cod, petrale, Dover and rock sole, English sole, arrowtooth flounder, sablefish, Pacific hake, spiny dogfish, walleye pollock, Pacific ocean perch, yellowmouth, rougheye and redstripe rockfish, widow, silvergray and yellowtail rockfish, canary, quillback and copper rockfish, yelloweye rockfish, hagfish, and Pacific halibut. A number of analytical methods have been employed in these assessments, like surplus production analysis, virtual population analysis, several variants of sequential age-structured analyses, dynamic pool models and depletion estimators. Biological objectives are the only consideration for these assessments and yield options. Yield options are recommendations on catch limitations and other management measures to achieve biological objectives and are made to the fishery managers of Offshore Division of Fisheries Branch (Pacific Region). Alternative options allow managers to consider high and low risk yields in relation to a stock's potential productivity.

A Guidebook on life tenancy options

by H. Rostum. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Research Division, 1993. iii, 76 p. Bibliogr.
MICROLOG 94-02157 1 fiche

This guidebook discusses a housing tenure concept called life tenancy. Under this form of tenure, a senior citizen can purchase a guaranteed lifetime occupancy of a dwelling, paying up-front a lump sum which represents a portion of the market value of the dwelling. On death of the senior, all property rights to the unit revert to the investor who holds permanent ownership of the dwelling. Life tenancy as an option for seniors does not currently exist in Canada. Various aspects of life tenancy, primarily from the point of view of the consumer, are examined in the guidebook. The advantages and risks of life tenancy are discussed against alternatives. Some considerations from the investor's perspective are also examined, to raise awareness of the potential of this concept.

This project required the development of a rigorous computer simulation system, capable of modelling driving cycles, environmental climate conditions, and the power, energy and emissions performance of a wide range of rubber-tired roadway vehicles. Existing software which has been used for performance modelling of weapons and aircraft systems was modified and new models developed to suit hybrid-electric vehicles, specifically city-operations transit buses. The models were kept generic enough that they suit all types of vehicles, when the appropriate component data is used. Large libraries of component data were developed, including chassis weights and materials, engines, transmissions, auxiliaries and components, batteries, fuel cells, electric motors and electrical systems. Also included were statistics of climate data, and the various driving cycles including the necessary grades for uphill accelerations of buses. This document describes the development and evaluation of the model.

Ice jam configuration : second generation model

by S. Beltaos and J. Wong. Burlington, Ont. : Canada Centre for Inland Waters, National Water Research Institute, 1990. 8 p. Bibliogr. (NWRI contribution ; 90-65)
MICROLOG 94-01954 1 fiche

The downstream transition of river ice jams, that is the region near the toe, has received limited attention despite its significance in understanding how a jam is held in place and whether extensive grounding occurs. An earlier numerical model was simplified and improved so as to enhance robustness and scope of application. The new model, called RIJJAM, computes longitudinal variations of jam thickness and water level by using natural stream bathymetry, by moving in both upstream and downstream directions, and by considering both equilibrium and non-equilibrium jams. Test runs were carried out to illustrate model performance in a hypothetical situation and to study the configuration of non-equilibrium jams and their dependency on the volume of ice in the jam. The model is then applied to a unique set of field data that includes measurements of ice jam thickness. Future requirements to improve the understanding of modelled processes are outlined.

In 1991 the Victoria Cool Aid Society, a non-profit society, undertook to study its new supported housing program, Swift House. The Society wished to know what the impact of living in this supported residential environment might have on the functioning of its tenants in comparison to a group of their peers (Streetlink Emergency Shelter users) who remain homeless. The current study presented itself as a unique opportunity to evaluate this impact by studying the social functioning abilities of these two segments of Victoria's homeless population. This report summarizes the research findings including the profile of individuals who took part in the study, distribution of social functioning scores, changes in social functioning over time, and the effect of variables such as ethnicity and primary diagnosis on levels of social functioning. Salient features of the findings are discussed and recommendations for future research are made.

Excessive sand production is one of the most common production problems experienced in unconsolidated, shallow heavy oil formations. This report describes experimental research aimed at providing a better understanding of the mechanism of sand production through a slotted (horizontal) casing with direct application to unconsolidated Lloydminster-Winter Pool heavy oil fields now exploited by SASKOIL. The work determined a representative and unique sand size distribution from field cores; developed a consistent experimental procedure for investigating critical factors controlling solids inflow in horizontal wells; and determined the critical fluid velocity that triggers production of solids. A new experimental rig was designed and used and three slot geometries and four types of sand packs reproducing the sand size distribution for typical field locations were tested. For a given sand formation, slot geometry and fluid viscosity, the occurrence of sand in produced liquids was related to a certain injection flowrate. Occurrence of fines in produced liquids was observed using a novel spectrophotometer device.

A primary consideration of the Task Force on Incomes and Adjustment in the Atlantic Fishery was to examine how the system of income support for Atlantic fishermen could be improved to meet their need over the long-term. This paper presents three main elements to an improved income support system for fishermen. The first is to improve the design of Fishermen's Unemployment Insurance so that it works better for fishermen. The second is to provide an element of income stabilization to fishermen's income support. The third element of an improved income support system deals with the administration of fishermen's programs, with concrete ways to improve information flows.

In the past decade several countries have implemented management regimes in fisheries that assign property rights to individual fishers and companies. This study reviews the theory and practical experience with these programmes and their applicability to Canada. These property rights can take the form of territorial use rights in fisheries (TURFs) or individual transferable quotas (ITQs). This study is organized into 3 parts. A general review of the theoretical advantages of ITQs is provided followed by the positive and negative experiences of ITQ management under different criteria (economic efficiency, employment, harvest shares of fishers, and quota regulation compliance) and in various fisheries. Finally, a summary of the issues with respect to expanding ITQs in the Atlantic inshore fisheries is presented along with a discussion on how the programme may be designed.

Energy substrate mobilization has been suggested as a limiting factor for the rate of cold-induced thermogenesis and consequently delaying hypothermia. The evidence supporting this hypothesis in humans is not convincing and the hypothesis has yet to be tested in a rigorous manner using a full heat balance analysis. This study re-investigated whether enhancing energy substrate mobilization by feeding cold-exposed subjects would improve the rate of cold-induced hypothermia and affect heat debt as well as rectal and mean skin temperatures. Nine healthy semi-nude fasted subjects were exposed to 5°C temperatures on three occasions following the ingestion at minute 0 and 90 of either a placebo, pure carbohydrates, or a high-carbohydrate bar.

A field study was conducted at the Kelliher water treatment facility to determine its effectiveness in removing arsenic from the raw water supply. The current treatment process uses potassium permanganate as a preoxidant followed by manganese greensand filtration. Tests were conducted on site to ensure optimum performance of the treatment process, including tests for colour, turbidity, iron, and manganese. Single samples for laboratory analysis were also obtained to determine the removal efficiency of arsenic from the raw water supply and the treatment process was optimized with respect to chemical feeds and filter operations for iron and manganese removal.

Labour market problems and mental health : a panel study of Canadian youth in transition from school to work

Association. ISSN 0317-2473
MICROLOG 94-02147 1 fiche

The present research uses a longitudinal, panel design to examine the impact of labour market difficulties on psychological well-being in a sample of recent Canadian high school and university graduates. In considering the effect of labour market problems we distinguish between unemployment and underemployment, a potentially important distinction given the growing number of part-time jobs. A multivariate analysis strategy which controls, among other variables, for initial level of psychological well-being is employed. This baseline measure of mental health acts, in effect, as a proxy for a variety of other variables affecting mental health, and permits a test of the causal impact of labour market problems and school-to-work transition on change in psychological well-being during the intervening time period. The increasingly prolonged transition, at least in urban Canada, from school to work and from youth to adulthood provides the context for examining the possible impact of transition status on mental health, as well as the possible interaction between labour market difficulties and transition status in influencing change in mental health.

L'économie du Nouveau-Brunswick et le public voyageur ne peuvent pas attendre vingt ans ou trente ans pour que ces routes soient reconstruites. Ce réseau routier doit être construit immédiatement. Le réseau routier continuera de se détériorer si des mesures ne sont pas prises immédiatement pour réduire les charges des camions, limiter les points d'accès et les panneaux-réclames en bordure de la route. Ce livre blanc expose les objectifs d'un nouveau réseau routier et explique les directives qui seront mises en œuvre pour atteindre ces objectifs.

Ce répertoire de localisation des populations immigrées et ethnoculturelles dans la région métropolitaine de recensement (RMR) de Montréal intéressera tous ceux intéressés à la distribution spatiale des principales communautés culturelles du Québec. Cet ouvrage porte sur la localisation des principaux groupes des communautés culturelles. Il s'en tient aux seuls groupes dont le nombre est suffisamment élevé pour s'assurer que la concentration résidentielle telle qu'illustrée par les cartes ne soit pas mal interprétée en raison des petits effectifs concernés. Le répertoire s'attarde surtout aux populations, ou aux regroupements de populations de plus de 10 000 personnes sur le territoire de la RMR.

This report was prepared to express the association's concerns with Bill 26, An Act respecting Environmental Rights in Ontario. The Bill was extensively reviewed by a working group formed in August 1993, including meeting with relevant government staff for clarifications. The report provides background information on the Bill and describes the proposed implementation schedule and its features, then details the association's major concerns. These include uncertainties about instruments and other pieces of legislation; the appeals process; delegated authority; applications for review and investigation; and the cost of the system. Recommendations are also included.

Prior research indicates that many immigrant women are disadvantaged occupationally by virtue of their statuses as women and immigrants. Additionally, some investigators have found evidence to suggest that more educated immigrants are not receiving fair assessments of their credentials obtained outside of Canada. Based on a subsample of 1986 census data, a model was developed to assess the strength of the match between field of post-secondary education and type of occupation for immigrant women compared to immigrant men, Canadian-born women and Canadian-born men. The strength of the match between field of education and occupation was determined by employing logistic regression procedures.

The carbon-in-pulp process is a proven technology for gold recovery from gold leach pulps. Following gold stripping, the activity of the spent carbon is always lower than that of the fresh carbon. This program had 3 objectives. These were to determine the energy requirements for the microwave reactivation of carbon used in the carbon-in-pulp process, to perform a preliminary economic evaluation based on optimum conditions determined from the tests, and to provide a basic concept of a pilot-scale microwave system for reactivating carbon.

Model for spectral colour variations of British Columbia river waters by J.H. Jerome...et al. Burlington, Ont. : Canada Centre for Inland Waters, National Water Research Institute, 1990. 43 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (NWRI contribution ; 90-168)

MICROLOG 94-01963 1 fiche

The observed colour of a natural water body is a direct consequence of the interaction of the incident downwelling sky and solar irradiance with the optically-active organic and inorganic components of that water. The colour of water has often been considered to represent an indication of the quality of that water body. Indeed, determination of the degree of scattering and absorption per unit concentration of each of the principal organic and inorganic components of natural waters as a function of wavelength can enable direct measurements of the observed water colour to be used to estimate such water quality indicators. This paper presents the results of an optical survey of British Columbia river stations taken during 1986 and 1987. An attempt to quantify the visual colour of natural water in terms of the human eye's spectral response is discussed, as are possible explanations for the visual colour variations defining the British Columbia river systems.

L'aménagement forestier repose sur la connaissance actuelle du patrimoine et surtout sur son devenir. La connaissance actuelle provient de l'inventaire forestier conventionnel. Le devenir, c'est-à-dire la prédiction des caractéristiques dendrométriques des peuplements forestiers, fait l'objet de ce document. Le but du travail vise donc la conception de modèles mathématiques fiables pour cerner le mieux possible la dynamique des peuplements forestiers. Ce document étudie le groupement d'essences le plus répandu au Québec, soit la pessière noire.

Monetary policy, uncertainty and the presumption of linearity by D. Laxton, D. Rose and R. Tetlow. Ottawa : Bank of Canada, 1993. vii, 42 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (Technical report ; no. 63) ISSN 0713-7931 ISBN 0-662-20859-5

MICROLOG 94-01612 1 fiche

This document describes a simple model that incorporates the key features of the policy control process. It uses two versions of the model to define two hypothetical economies, one where inflation responds linearly to the state of excess demand and one that introduces an asymmetry, with excess demand having faster and stronger effects on inflation than does excess supply. Using stochastic simulations of the two economies, it studies the consequences of errors in the model that is used by the monetary authority in formulating policy to keep inflation close to a target level. For each economy, it considers two cases: one where the monetary authority knows the true structure; the other where it mistakenly assumes that the other version of the model describes the economy.

Mortality modelling with order statistics

by P. Krishnan. Edmonton : University of Alberta, Dept. of Sociology, 1993. 10 p. (Research discussion paper ; no. 95) ISSN 0317-2473
MICROLOG 94-02146 1 fiche

In demography, the life table model dominates the field of mortality analysis. The life table methodology and its extensions are discussed in many standard books. The use of probability distributions to approximate the age at death is rather limited. A recent attempt by Krishnan and Jin presents a piecewise approximation of the distribution of age at death. The distribution is seen as a quadratic reverse Pareto in the age interval (0,44) and a quadratic Pareto in the 45-plus age group. This paper is a further exploration of this area with the help of order statistics.

Ottawa : Multiculturalism & Citizenship, Multiculturalism, Policy & Research, 1989. viii, 156 p. Bilingual (Langue maternelle : Recensement du Canada...). MICROLOG 94-02046 2 fiche

This document is taken from Census 1986. It presents, in detail, the languages of this country. Summary statistics of the languages reported as mother tongue from the 1986 Census showed that a significant percentage of persons reporting minority language mother tongues (particularly French outside Quebec and non-official languages in all parts of the country) reported more than one language as mother tongue. As a result, if only data which show persons reporting single mother tongues are shown, then a significant proportion of the total number of persons reporting other languages, especially non-official languages, as mother tongues, are ignored. The tables presented in this report attempt to overcome this deficiency by showing the total number of times each language was reported as a mother tongue, the extent to which each language was reported as a single response (only one language reported as mother tongue) and as part of a multiple response (more than one language).

This report presents the six main categories of life-course events and experiences that have the greatest impact on women's senior years. It first looks at the effect of these experiences on women who were born during the first quarter of this century. Based on information about how these experiences are changing, the report then speculates on how the situation of future cohorts of senior women may differ. These experiences include family life, health, living arrangements, education, employment and economic security. The report also includes a subjective dimension illustrating how women see the impact of experiences on their lives, thanks to the informal consultations carried out by Council members. Recommendations addressed to individual women, society in general, governments, community agencies, educational institutions, employers and researchers conclude the paper.

Migrant studies of mortality can provide valuable insights into the sociological, epidemiologic and demographic dimensions of immigration. In Canada, there is a considerable body of literature pertaining to the adaptation and adjustment process of immigrants; however, limited attention has been directed to their mortality experience. The main objectives of this study are as follows: to document mortality differences between native-born and foreign-born components of Canada's population for the period 1985-1987, as previous research has generally not covered the time period beyond 1971; to test a number of statistical models describing the level and age pattern of mortality differences between the foreign-born and the native-born populations; to examine mortality differences by cause of death; and to derive estimates of life expectancy at infancy for these two groups.

The report begins with a brief survey of recent research on non-standard employment, followed by an overview of labour force participation and unemployment trends, as well as industrial and occupational structures, in the two countries. Since non-standard employment is most common in the large and growing service sector, the report introduces an industrial typology which separates service industries into upper and lower tiers. It then systematically compares the extent and distribution of part-time work, multiple-job holding, own-account self-employment, and temporary work in the two countries.

The purpose of this study is to determine 1990 motor carrier operating costs for each of the provincial and territorial regions in Canada. The nature of truck service causes operating costs to vary significantly in relation to particular characteristics associated with each activity. Vehicle configuration, commodity utilization, regional area of operation, right-of-way conditions, and driver expertise and attitude affect costs. This study relates operating costs to these factors to produce representative information for a wide spectrum of motor carrier activities.

Les classes de taille dominantes varient d'une année à l'autre mais les individus de trois ans sont toujours prédominants. Les mâles sont généralement plus grands et plus gros que les femelles du même âge. Pour une même taille, le poids des capelans de la Division 4R est plus élevé que ceux des Divisions 4S et 4T. La pêche est basée seulement sur la présence de deux classes d'âge et vise principalement les femelles oeuvées. Les débarquements sont donc sujets à des fluctuations en réponse aux variations du recrutement. Les résultats présentés dans ce document pourront aider les différents intervenants du milieu des pêches au moment d'envisager de nouvelles opportunités de marché.

Performance assessment of the tension infiltrometer marketed by Soilmoisture Equipment Corp., Santa Barbara, California by W.D. Reynolds and W.D. Zebchuk. Ottawa : Agriculture Canada, Research Branch, 1993. 13 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (Technical bulletin ; 1993-12E) (CLBRR contribution ; no. 93-50)

MICROLOG 94-01622 1 fiche

The tension infiltrometer (TI) is a field apparatus for in-situ determination of near-saturated hydraulic conductivity. The machines have recently moved from being research prototypes to commercial products, so the information available on their performance and maintenance is somewhat limited, particularly for the Soilmoisture Equipment Corp.'s machine. The Soilmoisture unit provides no information on the hydraulic properties and maintenance of the porous disk or on the calibration of the bubble tower, both of critical importance to proper operation. This performance assessment of the Soilmoisture TI established the wettability, bubbling pressure, and hydraulic conductivity of the porous disk and the accuracy, linearity, and resolution of the bubble tower. Brief comments and recommendations are also given about the maintenance of the porous disk and the operation of the TI in the field.

Describes an evaluation of the Kidscience project at the Ontario Science Centre (OSC) while in the planning stage in 1993. The goal of the project was 5000 square feet of new exhibit space for visitors 1-8 years of age and their parents. Used front-end analysis to deal with plans that had never been implemented, and as an instrument for reflection, exploring the feelings, interests, and expectations of the target clients. Research procedures included observing children and families, administering a survey questionnaire, conducting focus groups, and gathering children's drawings. Participants included OSC staff, and children, parents, teachers, and child-care workers in the surrounding community, as well as families visiting the OSC. Concludes with an interpretation and integration of information from all sources.

The rise of the Reform Party of Canada since its founding in 1987 appears to be a rather unique phenomenon. Despite the party's evident success, we know little about the backgrounds and attitudes of its supporters. More importantly, we do not possess an adequate explanation of how these characteristics have resulted in the rise of the Reform Party. In order to address these issues, the Reform Party was tested against two established theories of populist mobilization, Macpherson's theory of the petite bourgeoisie and Hofstadter's theory of nativism.

Ces expériences comprennent la vie familiale, la santé, les conditions de logement, l'éducation, l'emploi et la sécurité économique. Le rapport fournit également un aperçu subjectif de la façon dont les femmes perçoivent l'incidence des expériences sur leur vie. En guise de conclusion, des recommandations sont formulées à l'intention des femmes, de la société en général, des gouvernements, des organismes communautaires, des maisons d'enseignement, des employeurs et des chercheurs.

Postoptimizing equilibrium flows on large scale networks

In a large variety of applications, equilibrium traffic flows corresponding to a set of slightly modified input data must be computed sequentially. Until now, it is believed that only a disaggregate decomposition approach, that explicitly works on the path flow space, offers the postoptimization capability. This note proposes a new postoptimization method to deal with perturbations of the traffic demand input that does not require path information. Numerical experiments on practical size networks show a drastic reduction in the number of iterations with respect to the naive restart approach.

MICROLOG 94-01857 2 fiche

The purpose of this report was to survey policies and programmes having to do with the professionalization of fishers in a select group of developed fishing nations other than Canada. This will lead to the identification of strategies and options that might be employed in the Atlantic fishery. To help make contextual sense of the specific options, the industry structure and the major issues and trends in the fishery in each country will be briefly described. The countries examined are Iceland, Norway, the United Kingdom and New Zealand. There is also a brief commentary on policy developments in the European Community.

It presents information on where women are now, administrator demographics, teachers as women, their work and quality of life, time, and the future.

D'après les résultats de pulvérisations expérimentales de perméthrine, dérivé de synthèse de la pyréthrine, un seul traitement à la dose de 70 g de I.A./ha assure une protection supérieure. Dans les mêmes conditions météorologiques, les dépôts de petites gouttelettes d'émulsions huileuses couvrent de 2 à 4 fois mieux les cartes Kromekote que les pulvérisations d'émulsions aqueuses. Quant aux préparations aqueuses, il faut leur ajouter des adjuvants pour qu'elles ne soient pas entraînées par le vent et pour qu'elles ne s'évaporent pas. D'après plusieurs études parallèles des répercussions subies par les invertébrés aquatiques, réalisées par des collègues de l'Institut, les mortalités sont notables même à la plus petite dose essayées. Ceci pourrait en limiter l'utilisation, contre les ravageurs forestiers, à des doses bien inférieures à celles qu'on utilise en agriculture au Canada.

Increasing suicide rates in Quebec can be explained as a result of the 'Quiet Revolution' of the late 1950s, which contributed to a decline in certain forms of collectivity, such as domestic and religious collective life and a rise in individualism. In this context, specific attention is devoted to the widening sex differential in self-destruction from 1931 to 1986. A reconceptualization of sex roles and suicide in the context of modernization theory is applied to the Quebec case.

This selection of highlights from the 1990 TESL Ontario Conference is divided into 2 sections. The social context of literacy section collects papers linked by the following common themes: the concept of literacy, in particular reading, as a socially-embedded activity; the question of actual cultural content in lessons; and the social purpose or utility of literacy. The papers in the methodological perspective section are linked by a focus on the learners and a shared belief that it is the learners who should shape the content and teaching strategies of second language classrooms. It deals with the cognitive, social/cultural, and affective needs of the learners.

Recent work in citizenship theory : a report by W. Kymlicka. Ottawa : Multiculturalism and Citizenship Canada, Corporate Policy and Research, 1992. 65 p. Bibliogr. MICROLOG 94-02033 1 fiche

This paper is intended to provide an overview of recent developments in the theory of citizenship, and to consider their possible implications for citizenship policy in Canada. The paper begins by laying out the dominant post-war view of citizenship. It defines citizenship in terms of possession of civil, political and social rights. It then considers the two main areas where contemporary theorists are challenging the post-war view. The first area concerns the relationship between rights and responsibilities, and the need to balance the emphasis on rights with a recognition of the importance of citizen responsibilities and virtues. The second area concerns the role of citizenship that is a source of unity while still respecting the great pluralism of modern societies. The paper concludes with a discussion of some implications of these theoretical debates for public policy in Canada, including policies on citizenship education and promotion.

The Environmental Bill of Rights Task Force was created in October 1991 to develop draft legislation based on five principles established by the Ontario Ministry of the Environment. The Task Force was made up of representatives from business, environmental groups, the legal profession, and government. The Task Force's report, including a draft Bill, was presented in July 1992 and public comment was invited on the draft Bill. Comments were received from labour, farmers, business and industry, municipalities, environmentalists, environmental consultants, lawyers, and individuals. After reviewing the public comments, the task force made 59 supplementary recommendations, contained in this report. The report also includes a summary of the Bill and a list of the groups that provided comments.

This report provides a review of national and international derived working limits of radiological surface contamination and identification of some important specific beta/gamma emitting radionuclides that are in widespread use or that are produced in large quantities in Canada that require special consideration. The report also presents a discussion of some important dosimetric and practical problems associated with contamination control and monitoring, with examples from Canadian nuclear power reactor programs, research establishments, and hospitals. Recommendations on future standard setting policy on radiological surface contamination in Canada and future research needs in this field are given.

The purpose of this study is to examine executive compensation in the public sector. It focuses on establishing acceptable and reliable compensation processes and practices rather than instituting control or watch-dog directives and emphasizes the importance of the sectors and organizations buying into the Commission's recommendations and being committed to the approaches that will ultimately be implemented. The recommendations and broad process for establishing equitable executive compensation that are presented in this report are based on a number of considerations, including: recognition of accountability; significance of public sector compensation costs; ministry funding and responsibility; and inter-organizational differences.

This document addresses the need to expand the application of the provisions of the Family Law Act to encompass a greater diversity of family forms in which individuals live in intimate relationships characterized by economic interdependence. It focuses on the following questions: to whom should the rights and obligations set out in the Ontario Family Law Act apply? What kinds of relationships should invoke its central provisions concerning the sharing of family property, the occupation of the matrimonial home, and the provision of support for spouses? Upon what sorts of relationship should the Act confer the capacity to enter into binding domestic contracts? Which family members should be entitled to claim for damages in the event of the death or injury of a partner?

In June 1993, it was announced that the proposed amalgamation of the University College of Cape Breton (UCCB) and the Cape Breton Adult Vocational Training Campus of the Nova Scotia Community College (AVTC) in Sydney would be reviewed. A Committee was appointed to conduct the review. The Review Committee, in turn, appointed a Steering Group to review the options available, making recommendations on its findings. The Steering Group's mandate was to evaluate the options for alliance between the two institutions, encouraging discussion and consensus among stakeholders regarding ways to meet the future learning requirements of the people of Cape Breton and examining the effect of alliance options on the educational programs, funding, tuition fees, physical plant and services, human resources, and students of AVTC and UCCB. The Group also wrote to individuals, organizations and businesses in Cape Breton inviting them to prepare public submissions on the learning needs of Cape Bretoners and the educational implications of integrating the two institutions. This document includes the task group reports as well as a summary of public submissions.

Resource access and supply continuity in the Atlantic fisheries

Access to a continuous supply of high quality raw material is fundamental to the long-run success of any manufacturing enterprise. But discontinuity of raw material supply is a major problem in the fishing industry. This paper focuses on processing plants relying on inshore vessels because they face the greatest continuity of supply difficulties, given the range of natural, regulatory and competitive factors at work. The analysis begins with an examination of the causes and effects of supply discontinuity focussing on conditions in the harvesting sector. The response of the processors is examined next, with reviews of capital expansion and efforts to secure direct access to the resource. Finally, current circumstances in the fishery together with options for dealing with resource access and supply continuity are set out.

Evaluation of the development process of transport networks in the extended metropolitan region of Shanghai over the past two decades. The paper considers first the historical elements, then examines how these elements have affected the process of urbanization in China. The geographic, economic, and political dimensions are analyzed, with special emphasis on institutional factors, particularly the role of public policies and the functions of the administrative structures on the organization of transport systems. An analysis of structural changes in the composition of labour power in urban and peri-urban areas allows for a better understanding of the organization of economic activities between foreland and hinterland.

Rock-fluids interactions in miscible gas processes : final report

Wettability is an important rock-fluids interaction parameter that not only determines the relative locations of oil and water in the porous medium of the reservoir but also their flow behaviour. To gain a better understand of the impact of miscible flooding on wettability, oil-water flow behaviour, and oil recovery, a project was begun in 1987 on rock-fluids interaction in miscible gas processes. This report presents the results of a literature study on the water-alternating-gas (WAG) miscible processes and a description of the apparatus and experimental procedures adopted for a novel dual-crystal technique to discern the influence of a miscible solvent on wettability. Water-advancing and receding contact angles were measured on mineral crystals representing the major mineralogical fraction of selected Alberta formations. Three Alberta reservoirs were chosen for the contact angle study. The wettability states of water-wet, intermediate-wet, and oil-wet were found for the three different systems studied. The influence of adding a miscible gas (ethane in all cases) to live crude oils under respective reservoir conditions was studied in the high pressure contact angle cell. A sequence of coreflood steps was designed to mimic the field miscible processes in the water-alternating-gas (WAG) mode and the sequence was applied to two of the three formations.

Size-related survival of resident salmonids from time of lake or river entry : evidence from the literature and scale evaluations

Of 3 possible ways to evaluate the prediction that the effect of size on survival will be stronger in mixed species communities than monoculture communities, 2 are attempted in this report: compare the survival rates of different sizes of stocked trout in both types of communities, and identify lake entry on scales sampled from adult wild trout, and compare back-calculated sizes to their respective survival rates. The report also documents differences between monoculture, interspecific competitor, and predator communities. Published literature was searched and reviewed to compile a quantitative database of size and survival of salmonids. Following the literature review the author evaluates and uses the back-calculation of size at lake or stream entry based on circuli spacing differences for trout in several lakes and rivers in B.C., to assess size-survival relationships.

An exploratory study was completed in 1992 in five autonomous public health unit organizations located in urban and rural settings in northern, central, and southern regions of the Province of Alberta with a sample of 57 staff and managerial public health nurses. Self-administered questionnaires, semi-structured interviews, and moderated focus groups were used in a two-stage data collection procedure to describe subjects' perceived work hazards, conceptualize the organizational factors underlying their work hazards, and report their suggestions for change. Frequency distributions and descriptive statistics were obtained for the perceived work hazards. This paper addresses organizational factors as associated with the safety, physical, ergonomic, and biological hazards perceived by subjects in their physical work environments.

Both models reconstruct stock abundance for 1951-92 and forecast pre-spawning abundance for 1993. Forecasts of recruit spawners are presented as poor, average and good, based on historical recruitment levels. The report does not discuss the development and evaluation of empirical models for forecasting recruitment.

Stockout avoidance inventory models imply that firms maintain inventory stocks that are too low to be justified by the data because the models are based on the representative agent paradigm. In this paper, a model is developed in which each firm sells a single, differentiated, durable product. A distribution over consumers' preferences for the differentiated products exists. The stochastic element is a lag shock that affects the consumers' preference for the differentiated attribute. Dynamic programming is used to derive decision rules for consumers and producers, and a closed-form solution is found.

Biological and physical measurements are being collected from 4 watersheds and adjacent portions of the Middle River in the Takla Lake area. Research, which began in 1990, investigates streambed gravel composition and movement, and the physical environment of salmon eggs, distribution of large organic debris, predator-prey interactions, aquatic insect drift, and distribution, movement growth, and habitat use by salmonids. Data loggers continuously monitor suspended sediments, incident radiation, stream discharges and stream and air temperatures. Adult and fry enumerations are continuing. These watersheds have received little human disturbance but the majority of the logging activities will commence in autumn 1994. Research results will be incorporated into guidelines for interior logging.

A high voltage electron microscope (HVEM) was used to investigate the nature of intrinsic point effects in α -Zirconium by direct observation of dislocation climb and cavity growth or shrinkage. The material used was Marz-grade zirconium that had been pre-irradiated with neutrons at 740 K in the Dounreay Fast Reactor. Dislocation loops of vacancy character that were produced during the neutron irradiation were studied by further irradiation with electrons in the HVEM. C-component network dislocations and cavities were also studied.

Summary of data from a study of provisions for gifted education in Ontario : a review and recommendations by S.M. Shiner. Toronto : Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, 1982. 10 p. Paper presented to Ontario Educational Research Council Conference. ONTERIS: ON04086.

MICROLOG 94-01580 1 fiche

Data revealed that most faculties of education did not offer specific courses about the gifted at preservice level, although more attention was paid at inservice level; there were no full-time staff, virtually no research, and no formal arrangements between boards and faculties. Most supported the notion of developing programs with the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education in a leadership role. Review of 12 boards' programs showed awareness of some of the nuances of gifted education but no evaluation instruments. The document outlined other specific processes to develop gifted education.

To develop a data base for lake management in the Halifax-Dartmouth Metro Area, it was decided that it would be useful to conduct periodic synoptic water quality surveys. The first survey of 50 lakes was taken 14 April 1980, immediately after ice out when the lake water was well mixed from top to bottom. Standard water quality variables such as Ph, major ions, and nutrients were measured and the resultant data were used to rank the lakes for water quality. The second survey was conducted in 1991 using the same or similar methods and including two additional lakes. Samples were also analyzed for aluminum, chlorophyll, colour, dissolved organic carbon, and a large number of trace elements. This report briefly describes the methods, presents the results, and compares them, where possible, with those obtained in 1980.

Tall oil pitch (TOP), a Kraft pulping process co-product, is a resinous substance containing fatty acids, resin acids, and neutral compounds, analogous in some of its properties to bitumen. In 1989 and 1990, a thorough study was conducted of tall pitch oil and its use was investigated as an asphalt substitute. Following preliminary laboratory investigation, seven paving projects using 227 tonnes of TOP in 31,000 tonnes of hot asphalt paving mixes were constructed in British Columbia from 1989-92. This report describes the laboratory evaluation of TOP and TOP-containing asphalt paving mixes and field test observations with a summary of findings and data collection.

In 1949, the British Columbia Research Council (now the British Columbia Research Corp.) began a study of marine wood borers as a result of representations from the forest industry regarding the amount of damage and loss of value to saw logs in transit or in salt water storage. In 1959, the Council began to issue monthly reports on its researches. The reports, called Tidelines, were distributed to a limited number of forest industry related companies but were discontinued in 1976 after 261 numbers in 18 volumes. While some research studies were published, there remain a considerable amount of marine wood borer data not generally available. To remedy this, 113 numbers were selected and brought together in a sequence according to subject, covering anatomy, drilling, food, breeding, growth, ecology, parasites, pollution, detection, intertidal exposure, vertical distribution, wood species resistance, maintenance, and limnoria.

Un nombre grandissant d'élèves du secondaire exercent un emploi rémunéré à temps partiel. Cette expérience du marché du travail se faisant concurrentiellement à l'expérience scolaire, certains y voient une cause de la réduction du rendement scolaire, voire de l'échec et de l'abandon scolaire. Cet avis se penche sur cette question et comporte quatre chapitres. Le premier décrit le phénomène à partir des enquêtes et des études disponibles. Le deuxième rappelle que le travail rémunéré à temps partiel peut comporter des avantages éducatifs, mais aussi des inconvénients, et qu'un vigilance s'impose du fait qu'il n'y a là aucun caractère automatique. Le troisième met en relief les conditions selon lesquelles peuvent être conjugués le travail rémunéré à temps partiel et la réussite éducative. Le quatrième dégage les défis que doit relever l'école dans le contexte du cumul des études et de l'emploi à temps partiel.

Waste paper as a biomass feedstock

SENECS Consultants Limited. Ottawa : Energy, Mines and Resources Canada, Canada Centre for Mineral and Energy Technology, Efficiency and Alternative Energy Technology Branch, 1993. vii, 174 p. : ill. Bibliogr. CANMET contract: 23440-19561. ISBN 0-662-21199-5
MICROLOG 94-01991 3 fiche

This paper aims to evaluate the availability and suitability of waste paper for conversion to biofuel and to look generally at environmental impacts of processing waste paper. It starts by providing data on waste paper quantities by paper type for each province or territory. Next, it gives a detailed analysis of the variation of prices by paper type and future price projections. The major practices of waste disposal, recycling, conversion and landfilling are discussed and the quantities of waste paper which would not be available for recycling due to technical and practical constraints are estimated. The feasibility of using waste paper as feedstock for each of 3 conversion processes is discussed and then scenarios are developed for different recycling rates and conversion options. Environmental impacts of these scenarios are described and emission factors for each utilization or disposal process are discussed. The emission factors are next applied to quantities of waste paper for each of the scenarios and results are discussed. The document ends with conclusions and recommendations for future work.

The overall objective of the program is for CBCRL to assist CBDC during the transition from traditional steel sets as primary roof support to using resin grouted roof bolts in selected retreat longwall gateroad development drivages through geotechnical investigations of roof movement and support loading. The 5 east bottom level driveage at Phalen Colliery was selected as the section to carry out the transition. To date, 9 geotechnical stations have been installed at regular intervals. Geotechnical instrumentation includes flexible sonic probe extensometers in roof and rib, strain gauged bolts and strain gauged steel sets. This report includes descriptions and sketches of each station, graphs showing total roof movement at each, graphs showing strain at various horizons in the roof and tables of measured and calculated data.

The City of Winnipeg Assessment Department in 1990 conducted a general reassessment of all real property. This study analyzes the relation between assessed and market valuation of single-detached properties to determine the equity of the assessment process. The 1990 assessment and the 1985 market price valuations are compared for over 7,000 observations at the neighbourhood characterization area level employing a wide variety of statistical techniques. One of the study conclusions is that the property assessments are regressive

This research looks at women's mental health on a collective rather than individual basis. Preference is given to the psycho-social approach to mental health rather than the bio-medical approach to disease. The goals of this research are to identify the mental health services presently offered to women in New Brunswick and to verify whether the system meets the needs of women. The technique employed in this study was qualitative research by means of focus group interviews.
